

Readers should weigh polls carefully

By JOHN CURRY
Post Staff Writer

Although readers of public opinion polls should understand the power they have on individuals, they also never should overestimate their validity, a pollster told a Greater Daly City Chamber of Commerce luncheon gathering last week.

Speaking was Geoffrey Dohrman, president of National Opinion Poll of San Rafael, a former magazine publisher who has switched to measuring public opinion.

There's much more to it than random man-on-the-street questioning, he pointed out to the group of 35 local businessmen.

Be skeptical, find out who paid for the poll and the size of the sampling before giving it any weight, Dohrman cautioned.

Some $5 million was spent on thousands of public opinion polls in this country last year, many of them slanted for clients "interested in a particular outcome," he said.

Dohrman quoted Peter Hart, a well-known pollster, as saying, "While polls are the newest profession, it shares many things with the oldest profession."

As an example, he cited former President Richard Nixon ("a bad personnel director") hiring the Lou Harris opinion poll organization after the Watergate scandal broke to ask the question, "Do you believe the President should be impeached and removed from office?"

There's a difference between impeachment and removal, but that wasn't explained and 87 percent of the respondents said "no."

The Democrats then hired the firm of Yankovich, Kelly and White to ask, "Should Nixon be tried in the Senate?" which is impeachment, and got a 67 percent "yes" answer.

"Who was right? They asked two different questions," Dohrman emphasized.

Another example connected with Nixon occurred after his resignation and while sales of his book were slow. A poll then indicated a majority favored his returning to public life. Sales of the book picked up after that, Dohrman said.

"There's a chance of 1 in 109,000 that you'll participate in a poll," Dohrman went on, getting several raised hands in reply to a question of how many in the audience had participated in public opinion surveys.

About 1,500 people are selected for the average poll, and "1,000 to 1,500 seems to be the magic number" for no particular reason, he said.

Politicians use polls to tell them how people think, but opinions and values are changeable, as are the samples.

"But the pollsters present precision," which isn't easy, Dohrman said. Answers to questions, for instance are most often "yes or no, black and white," which can be fed into a computer easily. "These are good for telling which way the wind is blowing but not for precise answers," he said.

"People twist in the wind today," Dohrman asserted, the same thing Gov. Brown and President Carter have been accused of doing, "instead of rallying people around them for their cause. That's leadership."

And because they're often done to back specific viewpoint, "Polls tell us what they (the client) want us to hear," Dohrman noted. "Politicians get elected, then go off and do what they want," adding that they have their polls to show they have public support.

The samples themselves must be looked at closely, because 20 only refuses to participate in polls. "Some of the problem also is absolute ineptitude by the pollsters," he charged.

The New York Times was embarrassed by a 1968 poll it commissioned on changing attitudes in Harlem, he recounted. The poll, allegedly based on 1,500 interviews, showed people happy with their lot there, and The Times promptly sent a team of reporters and photographers into the black ghetto to find out why.

They discovered quickly that some respondent addresses were non-existent, many answers had been falsified and only 300 to 500 people actually had been sampled by the Columbia University students hired to do the survey. The students had sloughed off, Dohrman said.

Better work is being obtained by using housewives who are closer to their homes than to the business at hand" and can be more objective and dependable, he said. The Times incident was one of those rare instances in which the client was able to verify the authenticity of the poll for which he had paid, he indicated.

Values in society are becoming fragmented, which has led to marketing fragment studies, or "focus group research" by the public pulse takers, and "makes the types of questions very important," Dohrman said.

More accurate methods of polling are on the way, he said. Two-way cable television, now developed, is one method of getting public feedback quickly and accurately, he said. Cable TV systems in this area already have that capability, if they're allowed to use it.

Strike: No agreement on progress

Mediator is liaison once more

Negotiators of the Jefferson Union High School District and the striking American Federation of Teachers Local 1481 spent Monday working through state mediator Michael West instead of talking contract across the table, but again with differing versions of progress.

District spokesman Dave Shepard said Tuesday there had been no advancement, but AFT spokesman Tom Fitzpatrick claimed that "we are closer to a settlement today."

The AFT has been optimistic all through this latest round of negotiations, which began about three weeks ago, while the district has remained cautious about talk of movement toward a new contract.

"That's a real surprise to me," Fitzpatrick said of the district's lack of enthusiasm. "There were some very positive exchanges of language Monday."

"Apparently it's their tactic up to the last minute to hard-line us," he commented.

The district did make only its second money offer since the strike began eight weeks ago, this one for a 2 1/2 percent pay increase. In September, district negotiators had proposed a 4 percent hike, accompanied by staffing cuts, or 5 percent without them.

Fitzpatrick observed that in stories about the tentative settlement of the AFT strike against the San Francisco Unified School District announced Tuesday the San Francisco district had come up with some extra money.

"It makes me wonder if maybe the Jefferson district position about losing money on the strike is true," he said.

He added that Monday's attendance figures showed about 50 percent of the students and almost 70 percent of the AFT personnel still were staying out of school Monday.

But Shepard said the district count Monday was 4,031 students, or 62 percent, and 150 AFT teachers, or 51 percent, in class, with the count still slowly climbing.

Fitzpatrick conceded that "one or two went back" Monday. When the strike began Sept. 5, only 20 percent of the teachers reported for work, according to district reports. Student attendance has varied from the high 40s to low 60s in percentage during the strike.

Candidates' night at DC church

The League of Women Voters of North San Mateo County will present a candidates' night for supervisory aspirants Oct. 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Hope Lutheran Church just off Highway 280 in Daly City.

Council summons phone co. on directories

Many Daly City merchants want to put a new Pacific Telephone directory plan on hold, the Daly City City Council was told Monday night.

Marian Mann, secretary of the Mission Merchants Association, criticized a Pacific Telephone program that would divide the county into three areas, each served by its own directory. The North County book would be named the "Pacificia directory."

"Pacificia would be misleading and could cost Daly City a lot of revenue," Mrs. Mann charged. She got a laugh when she said, "The only logical name for the North San Mateo County phone book is the North San Mateo County Phone Book."

"That's too logical," Mayor Victor Kyriakis chorused.

Mrs. Mann asked for and got the council to join in the protest. The council approved Councilman William Schumacher's motion to ask

New proposal for site use

A new proposal on two potential new parks was made by Daly City Mayor Victor Kyriakis Monday night to two Jefferson Elementary School District trustees with strong indications from Kyriakis that something may be brewing with the city at last, with possibly an "angel" involved.

The catalyst for this last-ditch effort was the bid opening tonight by the JESD Board of Trustees on the proposed sale of the Olympia School site, next to the Olympia Golf Club. The bid opening will be at 7:30 p.m., preceding the regular board meeting at the district office in Daly City.

Kyriakis and Councilman Anthony Giannonna met informally with trustees Beverly K. Forrester and Alvin S. Schwarzbach Monday at the Civic Center, with Kyriakis proposing that the school district either reject or hold any bids on Olympia. "In exchange for the City Council coming forth with a proposal to purchase Abraham Lincoln by Nov. 13."

The city is trying to keep its options open in any case, with City Attorney Albert Polonsky filing suit for the city last week for declaratory relief and a temporary restraining order to prevent the sale of Olympia.

The city wants 17,000 square feet of the eastern end of the Olympia playground for a neighborhood park. In an informal hearing Friday, Superior Court Judge Alan Haverty denied the temporary restraining order, but Polonsky said the city will proceed with the rest of the suit, which would assure it gets a chance at the piece of property.

The school district declared Lincoln and Olympia surplus and

'Block grant' program getting off ground

Daly City's Community Development Block Grant program is getting off the ground finally, but slowly, according to a fourth-year performance review submitted to the City Council Monday night by Director of Community Development Don Fleming.

There was more work actually done and more results shown, if the absence of complaints that characterize the program last year are an indication.

Since the 1975-76 fiscal year, Daly City has received $2,211,000 in federal Housing and Urban Development funds for housing rehabilitation loans and several park and civic service projects. Some $1,593,564 of that has been spent, Fleming reported.

The CDBG program, intended as a city, has been plowing mainly through HUD red tape, with the housing rehabilitation part of it showing so little progress last year that neighborhood groups were complaining loudly that it wasn't working.

Fleming noted in his report Monday that progress had been slow and that attempts have been made this year to liven up the act. The CDBG staff was increased by four rehabilitation construction specialists, soon to be five, and a temporary assistant planner.

But, he conceded, most of these have been replacements, because "unfortunately, we have also had a high turnover rate in the program."

'Shakespeare, the Globe and World' exhibit

By ARVILLE FINACOM

The red balloon is gone from the Music Concourse. The crowds, the waiting in line, the glories of Tut, Korea and Dresden are memories of San Francisco 1979. But the year is not yet over and the Bay Area not yet through with major exhibitions. Opening earlier this month and continuing through Dec. 31 is "Shakespeare, the Globe and the World", daily 10 to 5 at the California Academy of Sciences in Golden Gate Park.

A friend asked, "Why Shakespeare at Cal Academy?" There is a plausible reason why the natural science institution was chosen. Shakespeare was both a product and a reflection of his times. The days of the English Renaissance which began with the poet/philosopher/intensely political King Henry VIII and reached fruition under his intellectually adept daughter, Elizabeth I, saw both the flowering of English philosophic and creative thought and the budding of modern scientific interest in the natural world.

The current exhibit catches this totality of Elizabethan life as well as its earthiness and humanity which not only made Shakespeare's plays popular with the people of his time but also links them with us some 400-plus years later.

It's sometimes insightful as well as fun to pretend what someone else thinks.

As I stood before the stark white pedestal and spotlighted bust of Shakespeare backdropped by familiar phrases from his plays and highlighted by a running red current of words about him channelled electrically across the wall, I imagined I was experiencing the Bard's inward glow of pleasure.

Exhibition designer Stuart Silver has made the public pause. The desire to read every phrase is strong. The whimsy of several of the flashed-on messages provokes response. Laughter bubbles. Dimly one becomes conscious of the piped-over electronic sound of Elizabethan music. The stage is set.

Perhaps I've put too much of my own sense of the dramatic into the initial confrontal but in talking with designer Silver at the exhibition's press preview, I got the impression that he, too, felt Shakespeare would have approved the prologue.

Actually, the real prologue goes back a number of years. In 1932, the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, D.C., containing a wealth of English Renaissance material, was built as a memorial to the Bard and given as a gift to the American people by Henry Clay Folger and Emily Jordan Folger.

Two years ago an ambitious idea took shape designed to share the wonders of the Folger and to complement the Public Broadcasting System's broadcast over the current years of the complete plays of Shakespeare.

Selections from the articles at the Folger would be placed in "appropriate context" within a "fully designed traveling exhibition". Funding was secured through grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities, Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., EXXON Corporation and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

The result makes use of a multitude of print, graphics and electronics techniques. As one walks from area to area — through Shakespeare's "Stratford Years", his "London Years", and his time at the Globe Theater — the story thread unwinds. The images of Stratford, where Shakespeare was born, grew up, returned to live when he "retired" from London, and eventually died, are homely, rustic and practical.

Shakespeare's London years were dominated by Elizabeth the Queen in the same manner that a large, life-size photo reproduction of her as patroness of Astronomy and Geography taken from one of the books on display dominates a portion of the exhibit.

Competing for attention across the same room is an engraving of London set against a photo enlargement of itself which fills a wrap around wall. I think Shakespeare might have agreed that the juxtaposition is fitting. Neither Elizabeth nor London would have flourished so well without the challenges posed by the other.

The "Globe Years" portion is one which needs to be experienced personally. Enough to say that Shakespeare's own sense that the imaginary world captured in the Globe Theater was the glass through which Elizabethan society saw itself pervade.

The "World" section deals with Shakespeare's perennial appeal. The weakest portion of the exhibition — weak because audio-electronic details were not fully mastered for the requirements of the particular exhibit area — brings one up to the present day by means of cycling repetitions of modern film clips from a number of Shakespeare's most popular works.

As one leaves the final section where "collectibles" and colorful playbills in a number of modern languages attract the eye and attest to the universal appeal of the Bard, a plain wall, almost undecorated except for a few seemingly unfinished sketches confronts.

Again, senses sharpened by the lack of decoration, one pauses, looks, listens. As in the beginning, sound strengthens mood — "Forever, and forever, farewell". "O, farewell! farewell" "As many farewells as be the stars in heaven." From many of his works, his players bid us journey on, forever "faring well."

Throughout the exhibition in uncluttered cases against the wall or standing clear in room's center are the treasures of the Folger: an uncut First Folio of Shakespeare's complete works published in 1623 and inscribed by the original owner; Elizabeth's massive Bible bound in red velvet and a schoolbook signed by her father, Henry VIII. Two displayed portions of a deed to property Shakespeare owned in Stratford were once held by his own hands.

An alcove features the science and skill of printing which made possible not only the rapid dissemination of Shakespeare's works but also assured his literary immortality. Perhaps the second is too broad a conclusion.

The way in which Shakespeare manipulated words in order to evoke sound, sense and sight images on the traditionally bare boards of an Elizabethan stage is really what earned him an eternity of followers.

I think he would be pleased with the multimedia mastery of the current exhibition designed to open the spirits of us moderns to the rich and enduring quality of Elizabethan age.

In connection with the exhibition, several Bay Area performing groups are presenting lecture demonstrations on weekends at Cal Academy and elsewhere in the City, Berkeley and Palo Alto. Call 221-5100 or 845-0303.

The Living History Centre which presents the annual "Renaissance Pleasure Faire" provides local schools, clubs and other organizations with several "dramatizations" involving both professionals and a participating audience. Call 892-1688 for booking arrangements.

In addition, the American Conservatory Theater offers "Romeo and Juliet" as one of its 1979-1980 productions. Call 673-6440 for ticket information.

'Forgotten' back paces Jefferson

By MIKE FICHER

Sam Smith can no longer be considered the forgotten man in the feared Jefferson High offensive backfield.

The senior running back emerged from the shadow of more publicized teammates Richard Rodgers and Doug Cheatum with a brilliant 228-yard rushing effort and three touchdowns to lead the undefeated Indians to a relatively easy 27-7 North Peninsula League victory over visiting Westmoor Friday.

"Sam had the best day I've ever seen him have since he's been at Jefferson," Rodgers said. "I think if teams keep keying on me and Doug, there is no way Sam can't gain 200 yards every game."

"He did his part when they keyed on us. He took the show. That's what it's all about."

Smith commanded center stage with touchdown runs of 65 and 52 yards, and the Indian standout returned a Ram interception for a 27-yard score.

"They were plays up the middle and off tackle," Smith said about his scoring dashes. "It was the line that was opening the holes, especially Cory Franklin, Charlie Banfield, Kevin Sears, Rich Huertas, and Jaime Jackson. Westmoor was keying on Richard and Doug (the defending North Peninsula League rushing champion) and they forgot about me."

"People are keying so much on our outside game that the middle is opening up for us," Jeff Coach Lou Sanchez said. "The plays were nothing fancy. Just straight dives."

The key, as Rodgers and Smith admitted, was the offensive line. Rodgers singled out Franklin for an outstanding effort.

"I think he's been underrated for the last couple of games. Today he came out and blew people out. They opened a lot of holes for Sam, and he took advantage of it. As a team we were able to control the ball," said Rodgers.

Jeff not only controlled the game with 329 yards on the ground, its defense shut off the Ram offense, limiting it to 127 yards.

"The defensive line really put a rush on today," Sanchez said. "Even when West-moor went to the shotgun, we got to him."

Westmoor quarterback Tom Orloff spent little time in the pocket; he was scrambling away from pursuing Jeff defenders. The line, spearheaded by Jackson and Franklin, helped the Indians snare three interceptions, including two by Rodgers.

"Our defense will be the key to how far we go," Sanchez said. "Offensively, we can move the ball. If we can stop people, that'll be the turning point."

Jeff stands atop the NFL with a 3-0 log (4-0 overall), but Rodgers would not say that first place is locked up yet.

"I will not say we cannot be stopped; but I will say teams will have trouble if they start keying on two or three players. We have some receivers who catch the ball," he said.

Rodgers enjoyed his best passing day of the season, connecting on 10 of 16 for 92 yards. Manny Solis hauled in five serials for 43 yards.

"You can't win just running the ball. We worked on the passing game during the week. If we didn't people would just start setting up for the run all the time," Sanchez said.

Sanchez was cautious in projecting Jeff's title shot.

"There are too many good teams left ahead. Any one of those can stop us," he said.

PLAY-OFF AND WORLD SERIES NOTES

Things I became tired of in the playoffs and World Series: This can be almost entirely summed up in two words — Howard Cosell.

Specifically:

1) Howie's constant references to Earl Weaver as "The Genius." (Incidentally, Howie does the same thing with Al Davis, if you haven't noticed.)

I have always thought Weaver to be one of the better managers in baseball. But if Earl is a genius, why did he finish third last year with virtually the same team? I'll tell you why. Because last year Billy Martin, Bob Lemon and Don Zimmer were genius enough to have a lot of players having some of their best years while relatively free of injuries. This year the Yankees and the Red Sox went sour, which is how Weaver became a genius.

According to Cosell, if a manager has three excellent left-handed pinch-hitters on the bench in the late innings (which is where they should be at exactly that time) with the opposition serving up right-handed pitchers, and the manager sends the pinch-hitters up and they get hits, then the manager is a genius, never mind the players.

According to Cosell, Weaver is a genius for using his entire roster when he needs it. Which is why so many sports writers called Casey Stengel a genius.

But when Joe Altobelli insisted on using the same methods, he was fired. The difference between Altobelli and Stengel and Weaver is obvious. Stengel and Weaver had much better players with which to be geniuses.

Proof of the pudding, as they say? Remember how many physical and mental errors Pittsburgh made in the playoffs and Series (in the field, on the bases, etc.), and how they overcame them. Stop to think about it, and the Giants didn't really make any more blunders (proportionately) during the season.

The difference was that the Pirates had the talent to make up for their mistakes, and that the Giants simply had a much smaller edge with which to work.

But back to Tiresome Howie. Willie Stargell always has had a reputation as being a nice guy. Even a beloved man. That is, as they say in sociology classes, given. Mentioning it once or twice on international television would have been nice. But not as often as the commercials.

Not only did one get sick of it, but it could make you wonder if, because Stargell was the only player being mentioned as a nice guy, perhaps there weren't any other nice guys to talk about on either roster. Which of course isn't true.

Mr. Cosell also insisted on pointing out how many men Stargell was leaving on base. There are some points to be made about this one. When a team gets runners on base as often as Pittsburgh does, there are just as bound to be as many excess runners left by slingers as there are to be driven in by slingers. Which Stargell proved, much to my delight, by leading the Series in RBI (Although he had only one more than light hitting Oriole shortstop Kiko Garcia, who didn't get as many opportunities as did Stargell).

Point two, Stargell, in the end, proved that he could come through with men on. Point three, Stargell did not have all that good on RBI ratio in the regular season, so what right did Cosell have to expect him to do any better in the World Series? Stargell drove in 82 runs. Had he played a full schedule (instead of the 120 games he played, less sometimes not playing full games), he would have driven in about 95 runs, not a startling figure for a man who would have hit 37 home runs to go with a .281 batting average. Subtract the 32 homers he actually hit from his actual 82 RBI, and he drove in only 50 men besides himself, which isn't a whole lot on a team that had so many base-runners.

Third Howard complaint. What I thought was a tasteless ploy to add drama to the Series by constantly reminding one and all about the death of Chuck Tanner's mother. The announcement made in pre-game ceremonies was enough. The death of a close family member, particularly one who is not a national figure, should be a private matter.

I also was tired of every announcer thinking it mandatory to guess what might have happened in games had the teams been playing or not playing on artificial surfaces, or what might have happened to long fly balls had they been hit in one park or the other.

Add what became interminable, standard three hour games, not counting weather delays, no matter how large or small the scores.

And I wonder, had all that bad weather been in San Francisco, how many times the announcers would have harped on local weather, on what a bad park Candlestick is, and how many times they would have told the story of Stan Miller, being "blown" off the mound. If the bad weather happens in the East, it is to be expected and accepted. If it happens in the West, it is to be ridiculed.

I did finally figure out the basic difference between baseball and football announcers, although it wasn't that evident with the trio that did the World Series.

Baseball announcers have a better sense of humor. Football announcers tend to sound like they're doing a play-by-play of World War III. Which, in fact, they may. But they shouldn't admit it.

I was so happy when Cesar Geronimo in the playoffs and Dave Parker in the World Series dropped routine fly balls. With today's gloves, that should never happen. Unless the outfielder hot dogs it with a one-handed snap, which both Geronimo and Parker did, and which almost every outfielder does now virtually every fly ball.

I was happy because I would like to see players return to the fundamental "use both hands when you can." Perhaps such goofs on national television by stars will convince Little Leaguers that there is nothing demeaning about using two hands.

Have you noticed that when a player isn't hitting in the regular season, he is in a slump, but that when he isn't hitting in the playoffs and/or World Series, he's chokin'?

Did you also notice Ken Singleton's resemblance to the young, little Orlando Cepeda?

I'll tell you what I noticed above all else. I noticed that Bill Madlock, according to TV reports, at least, played the playoffs and World Series despite a sprained thumb.

And I remember the year, when Madlock was with the Giants, that he split his lip and stayed out of the lineup for days, and days, and...

FOOTBALL NOTES

Many fans, and I was one of them, were wont to say, early in the 49er season, "Be patient. They're not winning, but they've been in every game. The wins will come soon enough. The ones they could have won in early season will be the kind of games they will indeed be winning in late season."

But, after playing tough teams tough in early season, the 49ers have regressed to playing weak teams weak. And therein is a lesson to be learned by all of us. No excuses. You should win the ones you COULD have won, because if you don't, if you get in the losing habit, then you start losing the games you SHOULD have won.

Jack Burgett, who almost pulled the biggest upset in North Peninsula League history last year with his oh-so-close second place finished with the Jefferson Indians, is now the offensive coach for City College of San Francisco. And is it a coincidence that the Rams now have, statistically, the top offense among California community colleges?

Serramonte strikes fast, hangs on

By JOE RODRIGUEZ

Striking early and then surviving the second-half charge of speedster Carl Montgomery, the Serramonte High football team registered an 20-13 North Peninsula League victory over visiting South San Francisco Friday.

Fighting off injuries, bad weather and the strong running of Montgomery, the Warriors' 6-2 fullback, Serramonte scored three quick second-quarter touchdowns and then held on.

The Regents are now 2-1 in NPL play and 3-2 overall. South City dipped to 1-2 in the NPL and 1-5 overall.

"We don't have the depth that other teams have," said Serramonte Coach Ken Cook. "But no one let down and that's what it's all about."

Beaten by a rash of injuries, the Regents — bouncing back from a tough 21-16 loss to first-place Jefferson last week — were forced to play with a patched-up defensive unit that featured a pair of 130-pound linebackers.

"We aren't a big team," said Cook, "so we have to play with emotion or get our fannies kicked. I told them (his defensive players) that Carl would break away at least once."

Montgomery's performance — 26 carries for 185 yards, including an electrifying 75-yard touchdown tear — lived up to Cook's expectations, and then some.

Serramonte began moving the ball after the Warriors had tried an unsuccesful squib kick, but then South City's Ron Hayes recovered a fumble by the Regents' Daryl Williams, giving the Warriors a potentially big break with four minutes left.

Spearheaded by the rushing of Montgomery, South City drove to the Regent 20. But there the Warriors' comeback perished when Serramonte stopped Montgomery for a loss on a fourth-and-nine play.

South City Coach Mike Tenerowicz was looking more like a tennis match than a football game due to both teams' numerous turnovers. Montgomery latched onto a handoff, faked outside, cut back through the middle, escaped several defenders and outraced the pursuing Regents' 75 yards into the Serramonte end zone.

The PAT failed, but the Warriors had trimmed the Regents' lead to 20-13 with six minutes remaining.

happy with the Warriors' second-half comeback.

"I'm proud of them," said Tenerowicz. "They didn't quit. I told them at halftime that the most difficult thing to do is to come back from a deficit like 20-0."

But Oceana surprises

TN takes the Anchor

By GREG QUIGLEY

"The Anchor Game is a big game in Pacifica," said Terra Nova High Coach Bob Lotti after his Tiger football team pulled out a hard-fought 16-14 victory over visiting Oceana.

What was expected to be a relatively easy win for the Tigers proved to be another extraordinary inter-city grudge match.

"Oceana, for all the problems we have had this season, has a tough bunch of kids," explained Lotti. "They will knock somebody off before the end of the season."

Oceana has had many problems with the district teachers' strike, as well as losing two starting running backs before the season, then the top quarterback to an injury. But the Sharks looked impressive against the favored Tigers.

Junior fullback Solomone Havila, who recently converted from offensive line, rambled 60 yards in the fourth period to put the Sharks ahead, 14-10. Earlier in the contest, Havila scored the other Oceana touchdown on a four-yard scamper.

Terra Nova put on a tremendous offensive show. The running game was at full strength, picking up 210 yards, led by Mike Madsen's 127 yards on 15 carries. Tim Bender added 70 yards on 16 tries.

The Tiger aerial attack was led by junior quarterback Rich Miller, who connected on 11 of 31

Regional dispatch center 'would not save enough' money

Consolidating individual North County police dispatching services into one regional center will save money — but not enough to make it work.

That is the conclusion drawn in a report released by police and fire chiefs from South San Francisco, San Bruno, Daly City, Pacifica, Brisbane, Broadmoor and Colma.

If five cities pooled their dispatching centers into one communication network, only $50,000 would be saved, the report stated. If all seven cities combined services, $88,888 would be saved, it pointed out.

The city of South San Francisco, which now spends the most on dispatching services, also would save the most. That city's costs could be cut in half, to $155,000 annually, if all North County cities participated. However, most other cities would realize only a small savings, if any.

In San Bruno, for example, costs would climb by $64,000 with consolidation, as would costs in Broadmoor, Colma and Pacifica.

Daly City would be the only other city that would have an estimated cost reduction, with savings totaling more than $74,000.

Last spring representatives from the North County cities met with county officials to discuss regional communications dispatching.

The group reasoned that it would be less expensive to run one large operation than it would for each city to operate its own.

Pacifica Police Captain Charles English, in a report given to the Pacifica City Council Monday, said the cities found that consolidation would be technically possible but not financially feasible.

Costs were higher than expected, because more sophisticated equipment would be needed to handle the combined radio traffic and the radio equipment would have to be changed for a central dispatch center.

Under the five-city concept of consolidation, South San Francisco, Broadmoor, Colma, Brisbane and Pacifica would pool their dispatching services.

Ten dispatchers, five senior dispatchers, and a communication supervisor would be needed to operate the center, at an annual cost of $432,650 (including equipment and supplies).

Each city would pay a percentage of the costs, based on the population, total valuation and number of calls.

If all North County cities joined the communications network, the annual cost would be $779,710, with South San Francisco and Daly City paying the largest share of that cost.

The group of police and fire chiefs recommended that if all seven cities combined services, a new computer system should be considered at a cost of $1.25 million.

Costs for individual cities would range from $350,000 for Daly City, to $250,000 for South San Francisco to $62,573 for Broadmoor and Colma.

Dueane Williams, communications supervisor for the city of South San Francisco, noted in the report that consolidation does not save each city enough money.

"It appears at the present time that the current method of individual communications centers is the most cost efficient without lowering service levels," he said.

While annual savings would total either $50,000 or $88,888 (depending on how many cities participate), when those savings are spread out for each city the savings are almost negated, Williams noted.

And by using the proposed cost-sharing formula, he said, "The larger cities receive cost savings while the smaller cities receive substantial cost increases."

Another concern for the smaller cities would be that they would no longer have access to dispatchers who perform other duties. This could mean that some police or fire stations would have to be closed during certain hours — which could lead to a drop in service levels.

When the concept of consolidation was discussed last spring, city officials from South San Francisco, Pacifica and Brisbane expressed the strongest interest.

A Daly City representative noted that that city's communications center is only 10 years old, and it may be reluctant to join the other cities.

The strongest opposition came from San Bruno Councilman Gary Mondfrans, who reminded that consolidation would not be as inexpensive or technologically simple as some may think.

Westlake's favorite fun project

By JOHN CURRY
Post Staff Writer

Six-month-old Tigger has a "family" from which most cats probably would shy away, but this orange and white feline seems to like his as much as the family likes him.

Tigger's family gathers every weekday at Westlake Elementary School in Daly City, kindergarteners through sixth-graders going to school, while Tigger himself perches on a window ledge in the principal's office, awaiting his next call to duty as a class project or honored visitor.

The handsome cat even had a night in his honor Oct. 11. Students and parents were there for back-to-school night in a multi-use room wildly decorated with banners, posters and drawings of Tigger.

He also was the subject of an essay contest. The best authors in each of the lower grade home rooms and the language block upper-grade classes won a "Little Tigger" doll at the back-to-school night festivities.

According to Alta Reed, the school's reading specialist, Tigger has taken well to being the school mascot and visits classrooms once or twice a week.

"He's going to be a big cat," she said of the already-large Tigger, an armful for anyone trying to wrestle with him when he doesn't want to wrestle.

And because he's the school mascot, a local veterinarian has volunteered his services to keep Tigger in top shape.

Tigger resides during off-school hours with Principal Barbara Davies, who took over as mother project at the end of May, when Tigger — then a bedraggled, hungry kitten — arrived one morning after a little girl enroute to school found him in the street. His age was estimated at about seven weeks then.

The summer over, Tigger has returned to Westlake School healthy and ready for the school year.

He made such a hit that the poster and essay projects were begun, with all 352 of the school's students participating.

The drawings are self-explanatory, but there's no mistaking the flights of a child's imagination in what they write.

Tigger the astronaut.

Tigger the ghost-chaser.

Tigger the good friend of the family.

Tigger the World Series hero.

All have fit him into their dreams and aspirations somehow.

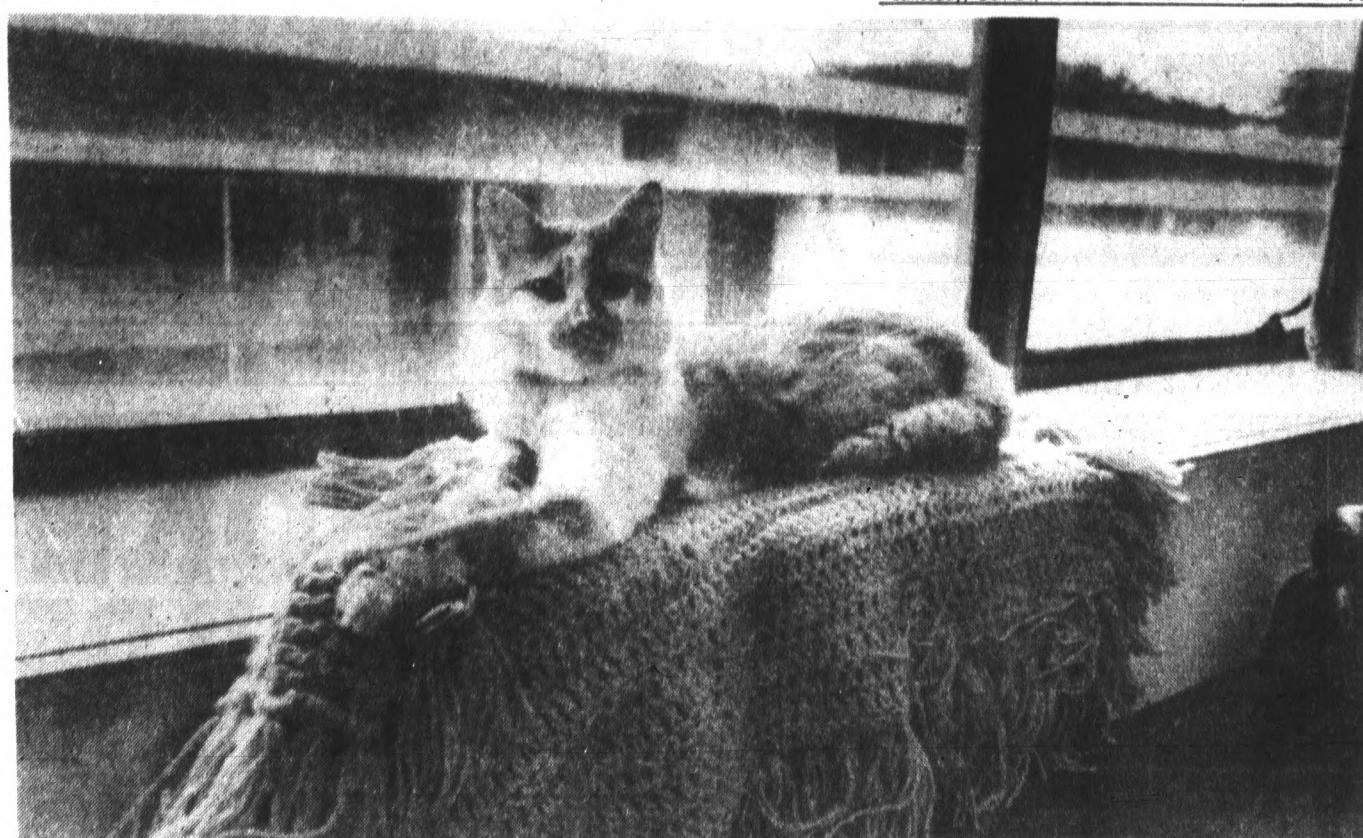

Little Tigger winners at the back-to-school night ceremonies were:

Kindergarten, Frondis Ridgeway and DeShun Washington; first grade, Tina Kyriakis and Alex Calica; second grade, Judy Gomez; second-third grade, Hilary Joshua; third grade, Trisha Barrados; third-fourth grade, Jacqueline Hull.

The fourth through sixth grade language block winners were Jeff Winter, Wilson Wong, Nanci Yuan, Sandy Kaskavalcyán, Esther Chi and Vivien Wong.

The young artists also received certificates of appreciation for their efforts.

Tigger observed the proceedings from the safety of a carrying cage most of the evening.

Tigger surveys his kingdom, indoors and out, in comfort

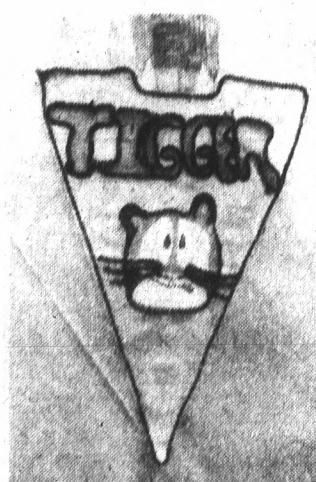

The school teachers and staff hung all 352 banners and posters on wires across the multi-use room, a long, tedious job. The children themselves weren't allowed to go up the 6-foot stepladders to reach the wires.

"I can't believe the teamwork," Mrs. Reed enthused.

Tigger and the outpouring of enthusiasm for him have done wonders for the school, she said, making it a much happier place in the midst of post-Proposition 13 gloom and cutbacks.

"There's been so much negativity for so long in the public schools," Mrs. Reed said, "but it's like an open house here now."

A booklet to help seniors taking the SAT

By ROBIN MOELLER
Commissioner of Publicity
Serramonte High School
As of Oct. 17, little progress in the strike had been made. A meeting was scheduled for 3 o'clock that afternoon.

Night school is open. It has been reported that 61 percent of the students in the Jefferson Union High School District are attending classes and 48 percent of the teachers are back at work.

For seniors taking the SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test), there is a booklet entitled "A Guide to the Scholastic Aptitude Test," that may be picked up at the library counter. Get yours today.

There are six dates left for taking the test: Nov. 3 (registration deadline Oct. 26); Jan. 28 (registration deadline Dec. 21); March 22 (deadline Feb. 15); May 3 (deadline March 28); and June 7 (registration deadline April 25).

Late registration fees are $5. You can take the SAT as many times as you wish, but there's a charge of $7.50 a test.

Most colleges require a SAT test. The best score out of the number of tests you take will be submitted.

A seminar was held for seniors all last week in the career center at noon.

Mrs. Haun and Mr. Silverstein gave out information on scholarships, SAT exams, financial aid and college applications. For juniors there is a PSAT (Pre-Scholastic Aptitude Test) available at the cashier's window for $3.25.

For seniors who have enough credit and can be released from school by the end of fourth period, and are interested in working at a restaurant, Mr. Chan had details for a job opening.

There was a freshman class meeting Oct. 16 during first period. Freshmen were given information pertaining to class officers, spirit points, etc.

Student Body Cards have been on sale for $5 and when you buy one you receive two free tickets to Marine World and many discounts from local merchants with valid Student Body Card.

There was an Executive Board meeting Oct. 16 during lunch. One of the big topics discussed was Homecoming.

Work experience applications are available at the counseling window from 8 to 10. All students expecting to receive credit for working must sign up for work experience.

Anyone who wanted to write a feature article in the first issue of the Serramonte Crown was allowed to if they turned it in by Monday.

Last Wednesday and Thursday, began the first interclass sports competitions.

On Wednesday, co-ed volleyball was played and on Thursday there was co-ed basketball. On both days seniors played against juniors and sophomores played against freshmen. The games were held at lunch in the gym.

Hopefully games will be continued every week. Freshmen sign up with Genny Hom, sophomores with Gina Hom, juniors with Sandy Nalls and seniors with Daphne Jackson, if you are interested in participating.

The Daily Bulletin says that it is imperative that all students who come on campus report to their classes.

It continues to say that contrary to what you may have heard, you are earning credit for all work that is now being done and that parents will begin to be notified of students who are not attending classes.

The Homecoming game will be Nov. 9 against Terra Nova. The Executive Board will run the concession.

Petitions for Homecoming king, queen, princes and princesses will be available at the main office between Oct. 7 and Oct. 22. They must be turned in on the following day, Oct. 23.

Pictures will be taken Oct. 25.

The Homecoming Dance will feature a D.J. and tentative prices are: $2 with a Student Body Card, $2.50 without a Student Body Card, and $3 at the door.

Freshmen elections will not be held until after the strike. They are having Freshmen lettergirl sign-ups.

Spirit week is Nov. 5 through Nov. 9. A tentative plan is: Tuesday, 1950s Day; Wednesday, Hat and T-Shirt Day; Thursday, Kids Day; and Friday, Spirit Day.

Medical Careers has been selling raffle tickets for 50 cents. The winner will get a free ticket to a free album to the best costume on Halloween.

Grand National to open

The West's finest entertainment extravaganza — the 35th annual Grand National Rodeo, Horse Show, and Livestock Exposition — featuring top rodeo action, elegant horsemanship, and quality livestock, opens next week at the San Francisco Cow Palace.

The unique "three-shows-in-one" extravaganza will open October 26 and continue through Nov. 4. Nightly shows are scheduled at 8 (Sundays at 7), with matinees on Saturdays and Sundays.

The traditional opening night ceremonies, with 50 mounted color guards from throughout the state, will inaugurate the 1979 Grand National's run. The ceremonies are being held for the 30th consecutive year.

The Grand National has been called the West's finest and most colorful package of entertainment. Highlights include:

SPECIAL ENTERTAINMENT — The famed Budweiser Clydesdales and acrobatic skills of The Fabulous Zoppes will perform at all 15 Grand National arena shows. The Clydesdales travel from coast-to-coast delighting millions of fans each year with their stylish high-hoofed gait. The Zoppes, a premiere rodeo act, have been entertaining audiences through eight generations.

RODEO — More than 600 top professional cowboys, competing for over $130,000 in prize money. Included among the entries are Tom Ferguson, five-time all-around cowboy and first cowboy to ever earn over $100,000 in a single season. Dudley Little of San Ardo, California, is also back to defend his 1978 Cow Palace All-Around Cowboy title.

The Grand National Rodeo, fifth largest in the U.S., is the last stop on the professional rodeo circuit.

Unusual words from the magazine, 'Hobbies'

Ikeda of

Naval

no grad-

03 mem-
Class of Annapo-

"How quick we are to blame the plight we find ourselves in on the President and other elected officials in all levels of government. This is certainly not the American Spirit of 1776 which brought forth individuals from all walks of life with the determination that the intolerable should and would be changed!"

It is strange to find such sentiments on the pages of "Hobbies," the magazine for collectors. Yet they are on the Americana page of the November issue, and they are worthy of the consideration of every American.

"It's time, perhaps past time," the author continues, "but never too late for each and every citizen of these United States to look into the mirror. There you will find, my friend, not only the problem but the cure."

These are heavy words, but in a time when the practitioners of the most sacrosanct profession will close the schools with prolonged strikes and when a strike or a lockout will shut down a billion dollar transportation system, is it not time to listen to the cries of people who will speak out?

"Are we so different today," the author asks, "that we must cower in the corner, blaming everyone and everything but ourselves for the plights we are in now? Are we, as a people, so guiltless that we really feel that the future will not be as good as the past?" If this be so, then perhaps it is time we change the motto on our currency to "God Help Us" instead of "In God We Trust."

The author continues, "I cannot believe that in all of these United States there is not an abundance of leadership available, not necessarily from the political arena, who have the same dedication, willing to sacrifice their all for a cause they believe would be of benefit to their nation as a whole rather than the special interest of their own or of a few."

This is what America is crying out for — leadership in all levels of government from your local precinct to the Federal level.

The author, who is Dale K. Graham, editor of "Hobbies," cites the place to start changing the attitude of many Americans.

Do you, he asks, "study the candidates and what they stand for?" Do you listen carefully to their campaign promises to see if they are elected that they follow through? Do you know your U.S. Senators? Do you know the names of your State Senators? Do you know their voting records? Do you know the name of your local government members or aldermen or trustees?"

It is interesting to note that recently an official from San Mateo County charged that less than seventy percent of the people are truly interested in county government. To show his concern he pointed out that in spite of months of study by a blue chip committee and in spite of a heated campaign only a small portion of the voters of San Mateo County took time to vote on the adoption of the San Mateo County Charter.

Such lack of interest by American citizens prompted Mr. Graham to wonder if we have reached a new low from the heights that we have attained in slightly over 200 years. "It is time," he says, "that the people start to change our present course, for our very future is in jeopardy."

Check other areas

By DR. DAVID R. BARNETT

Question: In a recent column you mentioned the importance of having a pet's eyes and ears checked. How about other areas?

K.L.

Answer: The condition of the gums, tongue and palate of a pet must be closely observed. The color of the lining of the lips and gums is particularly important. The lack of a pink or red color in this area could indicate anemia. The veterinarian also will check the mouth area for tumors, ulcers and other abnormalities.

Oral hygiene also is as important to pets as it is to humans. Although a cat's teeth may require less attention than a dog's, feline oral hygiene should not be overlooked.

Puppies and kittens may need help to remove milk or deciduous teeth. Young dogs and cats may have problems with crooked or misaligned teeth.

Many veterinarians are recommending that you routinely "wip" or actually brush your dog's teeth at regular intervals. Use plain water or a small amount of baking soda and little salt on a soft toothbrush, or a rough Terry cloth which has been moistened. Do not use toothpaste. It foams, and the detergents usually found in toothpaste may cause gastric or stomach irritation.

As pets mature, tartar starts to build up on the teeth. If allowed to accumulate and thicken, tartar will break the gum seal, and this will lead to serious gum problems. Excessive tartar can loosen teeth and cause gum infections.

Turkeys, tennis on tap

Turkeys and tennis

What do they have in common? It's the Daly City Second Annual Turkey Tournament for tennis players of all ages.

Sponsored by the Recreation Department, this event combines adults (over 18) and juniors (including 18) as double partners in a grab-bag drawing.

This will be a mixed doubles event. The doubles teams compete for turkeys in a best two-of-three sets elimination draw. Runners-up will each receive a ham, and first round losers will enter a consolation draw.

The first three rounds are scheduled for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night, Nov. 6, 7-8, at 6 and 7:30 o'clock. The semi-finals and finals are played on Nov. 10 at 10 a.m. and 11:30 a.m.

Players provide their own new tennis balls.

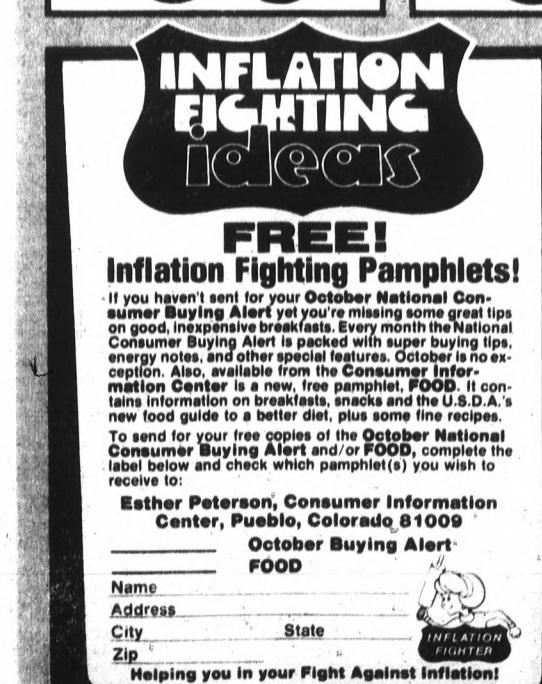

Weeknight matches to be played at Margate Tennis Courts, 75 Margate Ave., Daly City. Semi-finals and finals will be played at Westlake Park, 149 Lake Merced Blvd., Daly City.

Registration forms will be available at the Daly City Recreation Department, 134 Hillside Blvd., Daly City. Margate Tennis Courts, Westlake Park Community Center, Serramonte Library and Westlake Library.

Entries close Thursday, Nov. 1 at 5 p.m. Entry fee is $3. Preference is given to Daly City and Colma residents and club members.

BRIGHT LIGHTS BY LLOYD JOHNSON

Celebrate Tillie's 3rd anniversary

In celebration of the Third Anniversary of TILLIE'S LIL' FRANKFURT restaurant in Moss Beach, TILLIE SCHOLTZ will offer "2-for-1" dinners on Sunday, Oct. 28, starting at 1 p.m. Order any two dinners and pay for the higher priced dinner only. Breakfast will not be served on Oct. 28. PHIL LEHR, dynamic owner-host of PHIL LEHR'S Pay-By-Ounce STEAKERY, on the lower level of the S.F. Hilton Tower, is getting lots of reservations for fall and holiday dinner parties in the exclusive Executive Room of his famed downtown restaurant. The room accommodates parties to 50 persons ... Special offer for "seniors" (anybody over 60) at ALFREDO'S restaurant in downtown San Mateo is Spaghetti Platter and all-you-can-eat Salad Bar for only $3.29. Served seven days a week, including Sunday, from 3 to 10 p.m. The regular Senior Discount Cards issued by Alfredo's will also be honored on the special ... Judging from the many organizations and groups that choose the GROSVENOR AIRPORT INN for conventions and meetings, there are a lot of things they like about it. The conveniences and services offered at this South San Francisco hotel, under the direction of General Manager JIM RAINES and his capable crew, are numerous. Among the enjoyments is the popular BRASS ELEPHANT ROOM for dining and socializing.

Hana Japan even open on Sundays

To clear up any doubts, DENNY YUNE, co-owner chef of the HANA JAPAN Steakhouse restaurant in San Mateo, is indeed open six days a week (including Sunday) serving Japanese and Polynesian specialty dishes. Choose Hibachi-style tabletop cooking or conventional Japanese table service. Lunch served from 11 a.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays, dinners from 5 p.m. Sunday dinner only from 4:30 p.m. Not open Mondays ... Just one of many reasons for the solid following of patrons at NICK'S, Rockaway Beach, Pacifica, is knowing that all the good things that have been found here over the years can be counted upon to continue. And that includes the danceable music of the JIMMY PAYER group for dinner dancing Wednesdays through Sundays, with song stylings by sweet MARY ANN HAY on weekends. THE MOONRAKER and CAPTAIN CHARLES are two other good reasons to visit the GUST family's dining mecca ... Who was that handsome gent and tawny blonde companion seen dining on Chateaubriand Bouquetiere for two the other evening at the sophisticated DAL BAFFO European restaurant in Menlo Park? Strong resemblance to a popular Peninsula political figure, whose choice of restaurants and companions seems equally excellent. A Caesar Salad for two was specially mixed at tableside by Owner chef VINCENZO LO GRASSO.

Mix your own drink La Pinata style

Like to mix your own Sangrita drink? Drop by LA PINATA in downtown Burlingame and see how Owner CHRIS VLASSIS presents the potent portions. Tequila Gold, Sangrita, and lime over ice are served in three separate glasses — you do the mixing ... ROSEBUD'S ENGLISH PUB in San Francisco serves the full luncheon menu from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., so it's a convenient luncheon stop for shoppers from nearby Union Square. Among the most popular luncheon items are quiche Lorraine with Dungeness crab and England's Great Pub Sandwich ... A popular gathering place at lunch for Peninsula business people and others over the years is VINCE'S Italian and Seafood restaurant. One of the reasons you can lunch here regularly without menu monotony is that there is a different regular Luncheon Special every day, Monday through Friday, along with 10 luncheon entrees (served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.) ... If you're going over to Half Moon Bay for the big annual "Pumpkin Festival" this weekend, HAEKUN CHOI reports that brunch will be served tomorrow at his picturesque CYPRESS HOUSE. Choose the all-you-can-eat Champagne Buffet Brunch ($5) in the bar lounge area, or the regular Champagne Brunch (choice of entrees) in the dining area. Regular Sunday Champagne Brunch will be served as usual on Sunday.

Romano's dinners suit appetites

At ROMANO'S, an Old World-style Italian restaurant in Rockaway Beach, Pacifica, menu choices can be juggled around two or three different ways to suit appetite and budget. Dinner specialties of the house include soup or salad, vegetable, bread and butter, and dessert. A la carte entree served with a choice of French fries or spaghetti is 50 cents less ... In many Chinese restaurants you might feel you have to order for at least two persons in order to enjoy the combination dinner with an assortment of selections. But at GONG'S Chinese restaurant in South San Francisco JOHN CHIANG offers four different individual combination plates ... ACT's Annual Dinner for 450 enthusiasts was again held at LEHR'S GREENHOUSE restaurant in San Francisco. Following dinner in the beautiful garden in full bloom, guests danced the night away; some dancing to a full orchestra in a festive party room, others disco dancing in the adjoining Lehr's Cabaret Disco ... For something out-of-the-ordinary, drop by LES JON'S, an intimate bar/restaurant adjacent to Hyatt Cinema in Burlingame. After enjoying one of Chef ARNAUD'S old-time full family-style Basque dinners in the evening, sip something soothing around the huge open circular fireplace while BOB CELLUTI changes moods with his pianobar stylings ... JIM SNIADECKI, former 49ers linebacker, smiles his friendly greeting from the dining room entrance of his distinguished SCOTTY CAMPBELL'S restaurant in Redwood City ... ALI MOUSAVI, suave host/co-owner of the LA SUMMIT restaurant in San Mateo, is offering a bonus $5 off on any couple's dinner check if they mention Lloyd Johnson's name when making reservations.
